

Mary Ann Beall speaks at Women's Equality Program

Recently, feminist activist Mary Ann Beall has been asked if she's glad to have a breather now that the 10-year struggle for the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment is over.

"Over?" she responds, "I'm just beginning!"

Beall, a Fairfax, VA resident who has given much of her time during the past 10 years to issues affecting the lives of women, addressed a group of Gallaudet people at the Women's Equality Program in the Alumni House last Tuesday, Sept. 14. She spoke not only of her involvement in the 37-day spiritual fast for the ERA in Illinois and her help in establishing child care programs in her county but also about the historical achievements of women and her hopes for the future.

Nothing that women have been fighting for equality since the founding of the nation, Beall spoke of the many "ordinary" women who had risen to accomplish extraordinary things. "In my own life I have experienced just how powerful an ordinary woman can be," she said, "and I've discovered how strong I can be."

Beall said that when women recover their history, then they realize they are part of a long line of women and their dreams and struggles are not isolated: "We are never alone. We're always a part of that great community of women."

Losing the fight for the ERA does not bring an end to the struggle for women's rights, Beall believes. In fact, it helps clarify some things. "When we started, we women were not a viable community of support for each other," she explained. "Now rebuilding and reorganizing is our common goal. The Equal Rights Amendment is only the first step; real economic justice is our goal."

She pointed out that surveys have shown that more than two-thirds of the people in the United States support the ERA as it is worded. The ERA gives women equal protection under the law and guarantees that sex is not used as a basis of discrimination. But a handful of special interest groups hold extraordinary power in the state legislatures. "That message reached millions of women, making them mad enough to do something about it," she said.

Beall, who says she is a deeply religious person and sees her faith as founded on a sense of justice, participated in a spiritual fast this past summer in Springfield, IL. For 37 days, she was one of seven women who gathered to support the ratification of the ERA in Illinois. "We all felt called in a deeply spiritual way," she said. "We were all scared . . . We knew that fasting would focus our prayers and spiritual energy, and that was the primary purpose."

Beall told the group that she was still too close to the experience to be objective about it. "Together we walked through fire, and I am closer to death and life than ever before," she said.

because it presented the greatest challenge to ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. The state required ratification of the ERA by three-fifths of the state legislature rather than by a majority vote. Ironically, the Illinois state constitution since 1970 has incorporated the same words as the Equal Rights Amendment, yet they voted "no" on extending that right to the rest of the nation, she said.

During the fast, they emphasized to the press that they were not participating in a hunger strike; they saw it as a life-focusing activity, an acclamation of others. She noted that in 1774, President Thomas Jefferson also proposed a fast to avert the destruction of our country's civil rights.

Although the experience was not an easy one and the seven women were from different backgrounds, Beall felt the experience was a positive one and

Deafpride to hold conference soon

Deafpride, Inc., a non-profit organization in D.C. which works for the rights of deaf people and their families, will mark its 10th anniversary with a celebration conference Oct. 8-9. The event will be held at the International Hotel in D.C.

The theme of the conference will be "Advocacy—Working for Change." The event brings together people who have not usually appeared on a program together—civil rights activists, persons from community-based organizations and advocates of deaf or disabled people.

Speakers and workshop leaders include a number of persons from Gallaudet. Ed Corbett, director of the National Academy, will be the keynote speaker on the morning of Oct. 9 along with Audrey Rowe, D.C. Commissioner of Social Services.

Other Gallaudet participants include Art Roehrig, director of Gallaudet's Hearing Vision Impaired Program; Barbara Kannapell, CER linguistics specialist who is also president of Deafpride; Sy DuBow and Mary Jean Sweeney of the National Center for Law and the Deaf; and Jay Croft, an Episcopal minister with the Office of Campus Ministries. Nathie Couthen, a KDES instructor and Gil Eastman of the Department of Theatre Arts, will join with others to provide entertainment during the event.

On Friday morning, Oct. 8, the conference will begin with a Deafpride Advocacy Institute. On Saturday, three concurrent workshop sessions will be held throughout the day on various advocacy-related topics. The conference will close with a banquet.

For more information call Deafpride at 635-2050 voice or TDD.

MSSD welcomed about 100 new students and their parents Sept. 7 and 8 during the New Parent Orientation. Parents had the opportunity during the two days to meet teachers, attend their children's classes and receive information about the school and its programs. MSSD has a total of 426 students this year.

Alumni House opens for lunch

Come on over to the Alumni House this Wednesday, Thursday or Friday. The opening of the upstairs dining area for faculty, staff and alumni will be celebrated these three days (Sept. 22-24) with a free dessert and a slide presentation on the history of the historic old building.

Special lunch hours on these three days only will be 11 a.m.-2 p.m. After that, regular lunch hours will be weekdays from 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. Two menus are available and are priced at either $2.25 or $3.50. Beer and wine will also be sold at an additional cost.

Secret Societies—Part II

by Michael J. Olson

When an oath of membership had been administered for new members of H.O.S.S., it was customary for the secretary to make the cabalistic sign of the H.O.S.S. on the forehead of the candidate, after first dipping his finger into "holy water." The water was later replaced by elderberry, which has a reddish tint and was chosen because of its symbolic coloration. A bloody death was guaranteed for those who dared break the oath of silence.

A third substance was also used for a short time. Some of the students who studied chemistry made a concoction using silver nitrate. The concoction was rubbed lightly on the center of the forehead. No mark was visible because of darkness in the shadowy chamber. The next morning, as the new members prepared for Sunday services in the Chapel, they looked into the mirror and were shocked to see a large black spot in their foreheads staring at them like the eye of Cyclops. Failing to remove the spots with every means available, the students unwillingly trudged off to chapel to face the sneers of their fellow students. If they skipped the service, they would get demerits for that.

The Buff and Blue (May 1897) relates the following tale as Dr. Edward Miner Gallaudet entered the chapel to begin the service:

"... Promptly on the stroke of nine, the President entered the chapel and took his place on the platform. He opened the Bible, found the passage for the morning, and then raised his eyes to glance over the assembly before beginning the services. There on the left his look was arrested by a row of seven staring black spots in the middle of as many white foreheads. There was the slightest twitching of the worthy Doctor's lips, which might have been the effort to repress an involuntary smile at the ludicrousness of the sight, and then the services proceeded as usual." The students never tried to use the concoction again. The spots fortunately disappeared from the students' foreheads about one week later!

An interesting event happened on the Gallaudet campus on Saturday, June 14, 1890. Members of H.O.S.S., after their meeting, decided to place two effigies of Oscar H. Regensburg and Stephen Shuey, members of the Class of 1890 and also members of the secret society, on an iron rod over a big bonfire. Each of the effigies had a placard on each breast. The placards read: "Regensburg, Divulger of the Secrets of the H.O.S.S.," and "Shuey, Betrayer of the H.O.S.S." The raucous event was so noticeable that accounts of it were written up in both Washington and New York newspapers. The Washington Post (June 15, 1890) gives the following account:

"Both being members of the senior class the seniors did all they could to prevent the consummation of the H.O.S.S.'s vengeance. They gathered and led by Shuey, then "rushed" the procession as it came out of the building in which the H.O.S.S. hall is located, but did not succeed in capturing the effigies. Shuey made a desperate fight to secure his effigy, but he was hopelessly outnumbered. The figures were liberally soaked with Kerosene and then the fire was kindled.

... The trouble dates from the seniors' class day when Regensburg, who was the herald of the H.O.S.S., in his oration referred in a keenly sarcastic vein to certain things that were held to be secrets of the H.O.S.S. Shuey was grand mogul of the society, and he is charged with having profaned the H.O.S.S. temple by allowing uninitiated eyes to see into it and see its sacredly-secret mysteries."

Due to incidents like this and because hazing had become a serious problem, Dr. Gallaudet brought to chapel one day a red book which he asked all to sign. With their signature, the students vowed never to engage in hazing again. All signed it. Meanwhile, Professor Joseph Gordon had collected information about Greek fraternities at various colleges around the country. He made this information available to the students and encouraged them to read it and consider establishing a Greek letter fraternity at Gallaudet College.

In October, 1894, H.O.S.S. was forced to disband because its secrets had been divulged to the public and hazing had been eliminated. Instead, H.O.S.S. members found a new fraternity, adopting the Greek letter fraternity called Xi Phi Sigma. The first Greek fraternity at Gallaudet College held its first meeting at the old Kendall Home on Oct. 26, 1894.

Effigies of two of these students from the Class of 1890—Oscar H. Regensburg and Stephen Shuey—were burned in effigy as those who divulged secrets of H.O.S.S. Class of 1890 members, from left, were Cadwallader L. Washburn, Hobart L. Tracy, Thomas Hagerby, Regensburg, Frank A. Leitner, Shuey and William H. Zorn. The photograph is from the Gallaudet College Archives.

Symbol design contest for deaf sponsored by national church group

Deaf people are being solicited to design a symbol or logo to be part of a resource kit to help people as they work in ministry with deaf people.

The symbol design contest is being sponsored by the Task Force on Persons with a Hearing Impairment of the National Council of Churches. The kit will include articles on deaf ministry, a slide show about deaf ministry, a cassette tape, a poster and other things. One symbol or logo will be put on each item and the logo will also be included in advertising for the resource kit.

The deadline for submitting entries to the contest is Oct. 30, 1982, and the winner will be awarded $100 and a letter of recognition. The winning design will become the property of the Task Force and will be copyrighted by the Task Force for use with its resource kit. Artistic credit will be given to the winning designer in the resource kit itself.

Contest organizers are looking for a symbol that shows good feeling about deaf people as participating members of a church community. The symbol should show the church, the deaf person and their ministry with each other. The art work should be a line drawing done in a single color, preferably black on white, and can be any shape. The actual size of the original art work should be about six inches or larger but the design should be able to be either reduced or enlarged.

Each deaf person can submit up to three designs, with name, address and telephone number on the back of each piece of art work. Entries must be postmarked by Oct. 30, 1982. For further information or to submit designs, contact the Task Force on Hearing Impairments, National Council of Churches, c/o Ima Jean Kidd, Room 706, 475 Riverside Dr., New York, NY 10115.

Language program

The Department of Education has announced Nov. 1 as the applications deadline for funding proposals under their National Language Resource Centers Program. Through these awards, ED supports programs and centers in modern foreign languages and international studies. An estimated $5.7 million will be available in fiscal year 1983 for new awards.

Additional information regarding this program can be obtained from the Division of Advanced Training Research, International Education Programs, Department of Education, Room 3823-3308, 400 Maryland Avenue SW, Washington, D.C. 20202, 245-2356.

ICD sponsors seminar

The International Center on Deafness will be sponsoring its annual International Seminar from Oct. 4-29 this year. The 10 participants will be coming to Gallaudet from South Africa, Malaysia, Thailand and Jamaica.

While here, they will be having presentations from individuals on campus on topics including linguistics, speech therapy and psychology of the deaf. They will also visit the Maryland School for the Deaf in Columbia, MD, the National Association of the Deaf and the A.G. Bell Associations.

The group will also be making presentations on their own countries and deaf culture in their countries, and these presentations will be open to any interested persons.

For more information on the seminar or the group presentations, contact the International Center on Deafness at x5316.

A Message from the President

The veto and override

Recently the newspapers reported the actions of President Reagan and the Congress of the United States on a supplementary appropriations bill. This is a bill which was drafted near the end of the 1982 fiscal year in order to meet specified costs which were not covered by the initial appropriations bill. President Reagan vetoed the bill as a "budget buster" bill. The Congress overrode this veto easily with a margin of 22 votes. The Senate mustered exactly the two-thirds majority needed to override the veto. The supplemental appropriations bill became law.

What did all of this political activity have to do with Gallaudet College? Inasmuch as the Gallaudet College request for FY '82 (Oct. 1, 1981-Sept. 30, 1982), along with requests of all federally assisted programs, had been reduced by 4% in a continuing resolution, we had requested the restoration of this 4% in the supplemental appropriations bill. The passage of the bill means that we received this 4% late in the year. However, the funds representing the 4% must be obligated by Sept. 30, 1982 or the money returns to the U.S. Treasury.

Although we did not expect the veto to be overridden, we desperately needed the restoration of the 4% and were prepared to obligate it immediately. Fully a fourth of the funds were obligated for the renovation of the Northwest Campus. The repair and renovation of this facility is critical, and funds available for this purpose have been very difficult to obtain. Slightly over half of these funds have been obligated to bring the Gallaudet College Computer Center up-to-date. This will complete the purchase of two modern computers and provide funds for the renovation of the EMG Building to house part of the Computer Center. This is a critical need, for demand is increasing monthly for more data processing service in instruction and research as well as management.

The balance of the funds have been obligated to increased deferred maintenance and to pay for contractual projects. The college has continuing maintenance needs—chairs break, carpets wear out, classrooms need renovation, buses need new parts, plumbing needs replacement, and so on. In addition we will pay for projects such as another issue of the research journal, Directions, and an update of the College/Career Guide.

The College was most fortunate to receive a return of the 4% cut of the FY '82 budget. We have obligated these funds in the very brief time in a way which achieves our original budget goals and which puts the College in a stronger position to receive full funding in FY 1983 (which begins Oct. 1, 1982). We are currently working on the FY 1983 appropriation and expect to start the new fiscal year with a continuing resolution. Once we know what the initial level of funding will be for FY 1983 will be able to proceed with pay raises for this 1983 fiscal year.

Oldenburg prints come to Gallaudet

by Judy Bortner
Office of Fine Arts in Education

A group of prints by contemporary artist Claes Oldenburg will be on loan to Gallaudet for the fall term from the corporate collection of the Capital Group, Inc., in Los Angeles. Known as the Screw series, the lithographs will be exhibited first in the Learning Center and then in MSSD.

Often referred to as a Pop artist, Oldenburg is concerned with making us look beyond surface appearances. The subjects of his art are objects which are familiar to us all, but his art is not just a replica of a typewriter or a typewriter or a clothespin which he depicts. His art is based on opposites and irony. In his hands these objects are transformed. The juicy hamburger becomes unappetizing, inedible plaster. The nearly indestructible office workhorse, the typewriter, in its soft, pliable vinyl form, becomes as vulnerable as a newborn infant. Or what could be more ordinary and harmless than a wooden clothespin? But at 40 feet high it becomes a vicious, threatening monster whose jaws are ready to devour us.

As in the Screw series on exhibit at Gallaudet, Oldenburg often uses the same object over and over again as the subject of his work. He uses it, though, in different contexts or media. If we let our imagination go, this everyday object, as Oldenburg twists and turns it, can have a number of meanings and associations.

Everything in Oldenburg's work is carried to extreme as a satire on the banality of American life. Although humorous, Oldenburg's vinyl toilets, plaster pieces of cake and hundred-foot baseball bats are meant to be taken seriously. It is their exaggeration and absurdity which shocks people into an awareness of their environment and society. By choosing subjects which are everyday objects rather than paintings or sculptures which we immediately recognize as "art," Oldenburg forces us to react to them in terms of our normal expectations and to have these expectations challenged. Oldenburg, like Goya in the 18th century, holds up a mirror to society so that it can see itself transformed.

that they received overwhelming support from many women in Illinois.

With the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, the process must begin again, said Beall. She noted that each month now, the National Organization of Women is raising more money each month than the Democratic National Committee. The ERA was re-introduced into the House and Senate last July 14, and Beall predicted that during the next few years it will become a hot issue again. Tutor needed

A wealthy couple in Costa Rica is looking for a tutor for their deaf 25-year-old daughter who has cerebral palsy. She was educated orally in Spain, and her parents are anxious to locate a Spanish-speaking tutor.

For more information, interested persons can contact Maria Infante de Brenes, Foto Brenes, Av -4, Calles 9-11, Cartago, Costa Rica, Central America.

Cassie Wilson is a secretary with the Personnel Office.

Art Roehrig, director of Gallaudet's Hearing-Vision Impaired Program, addressed a packed audience at Western Maryland College recently. He spoke to graduate students planning careers in the field of deaf-blindness. His interpreter was Charlene Laba, a graduate of Gallaudet's Interpreter Training Program.

Fulbright scholarships available

The 1983-84 competition for grants for graduate study abroad offered under the Fulbright Program and by foreign governments, universities and private donors will close on Oct. 31, 1982. Qualified graduate students may apply for one of the approximately 500 awards which are available to 50 countries.

Most of the grants offered provide round-trip transportation, tuition and maintenance for one academic year; a few provide international travel only or a stipend intended as a partial grant-in-aid.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens, must generally hold a bachelor's degree and, in most cases, should be proficient in the language of the host country. Creative and performing artists are not required to have a bachelor's degree but must have four years of professional study or equivalent experience. Social work applicants must have at least two years of professional experience after the Master of Social Work degrees.

Application forms and further information can be provided through Gallaudet's Fulbright advisor Tom Landers, dean of the School of Education and Human Services. He can be contacted at x5394.
